

High-quality aluminum alloy ladder-type cable trays

AI Overview

Aluminum alloy ladder cable trays are lightweight, corrosion-resistant, and high-strength solutions for efficient cable management in industrial, commercial, and outdoor environments.

Key Features

- Lightweight and Durable: Aluminum ladder trays are significantly lighter than steel alternatives, making them easier to handle and install while maintaining high structural strength and load capacity.
- Corrosion Resistance: Aluminum naturally resists rust and corrosion, even in harsh environments such as coastal areas or industrial facilities, ensuring long-term durability and minimal maintenance.
- High Load Capacity: Designed to support dense cable runs, aluminum ladder trays can handle heavy electrical and data cables while preventing sagging or deformation.
- Thermal Conductivity: Aluminum's high thermal conductivity helps dissipate heat from cables, reducing the risk of overheating and enhancing safety.
- Non-Magnetic and Non-Sparking: Aluminum trays are non-magnetic, reducing electromagnetic interference, which is critical in sensitive installations like data centers.
- Ease of Installation: Ladder trays feature side rails connected by transverse rungs, often fastened using swaging or bolted methods, allowing quick installation and easy access for future cable additions or modifications.
- Compliance and Standards: Many aluminum ladder trays meet UL, CSA, and NEMA VE-1 standards, ensuring safety, reliability, and compatibility with industry requirements.

Design and Types

- C-Channel Swage Ladder Trays: These consist of two aluminum side rails with transverse rungs, providing rigidity and maximum ventilation for cables. Swaging ensures strong mechanical and electrical connections.
- Cope Aluminum Swage Ladder Trays: Ideal for high-vibration environments, these trays offer superior rigidity and easy cable installation.
- Curvilinear and Zero Tange...
